

Michelle Biggio/Staff

Promise of the future: During dedication ceremonies Saturday for the Life Sciences building, U.Ga. President Charles Knapp (fifth from left) lauded the "leaders of vision," including Gov. Zell Miller (fourth from right), who realized the "crucial role of research" and made the building possible.

BIOSCIENCE CENTER DEDICATED

The University of Georgia's $37.5 million Bioscience Building was dedicated Saturday. Among those on hand were (l-r) former Gov. Joe Frank Harris, former UGA Pres. Fred Davison, Gov. Zell Miller and Chancellor H. Dean Propst. (photo by Greg Hirshoren)

Cutting the ribbon in front of the new Life Sciences Complex are, from left to right: John Wampler, interim head, biochemistry; University System Chancellor H. Dean Propst; former Gov. Joe Frank Harris; Gov. Zell Miller; UGA President Charles B. Knapp; former UGA President Fred Davison; Harry Peck Jr., biochemistry professor; Sidney Kushner, genetics department head, and Tom Murphy, speaker of the Georgia House.

